

Buckling Arm Robot

Abstract

A buckling arm robot for machining workpieces with laser radiation has at least a first axis, a second axis, a third axis, a fourth axis, and a fifth axis. A laser device is arranged in the second axis and configured to emit a laser beam. The laser beam emitted by the laser device is guided within the third, fourth, and fifth axes before striking a workpiece to be machined.